The precast concrete industry is showing a solid growth worldwide. Quality, productivity, efficient cost and value management from project inception to completion are just some of the advantages of prefab concrete over traditional construction methods. At the same time, precast companies are faced with specific challenges.

All of the processes – the design and detailing, production, construction site management and many more – need to be merged into an effectively functioning, homogeneous unit. Consistency of information and data over the whole process is the key to success.
